Yesterday - Today - Tomorrow

Barbarian Sportsweave was founded in 1981 by Bill Hartle. Bill saw an opportunity to manufacture a world quality rugby kit domestically. With a strong attention to durability & design, Barbarian products were developed to withstand the rigours of a grueling rugby match yet give a unique look while maintaining optimal performance. Soon teams from across Canada began asking for the brand. In the first 2 years, a network of stores throughout Canada sold Barbarian products to the rugby market.

In 1983 Barbarian was introduced to the Canadian university spirit wear market. The fact that Barbarian could make rugby shirts in small lots, in school colours and with custom embroidery, made it a good fit for college and university bookstores like Queens, UBC and Dalhousie. Barbarian quickly began to expand into the United States in both team and university markets. Customers included Harvard, Ohio State and University of Michigan.

In 1995 the company built a dedicated -state of the art- manufacturing facility in Kitchener, Ontario, where it continues to manufacture today. From 2003 - 2007 Barbarian was the official supplier to the Canadian National Rugby Team. In 2009 Barbarian uniforms were used in the Matt Damon & Morgan Freeman hit movie, Invictus, about the South African rugby team's sensational victory at the World Cup.

Today, Barbarian is proud to be the Official On-Field Supplier to Rugby Ontario and the Mexican National Rugby Team.

In 2013 Barbarian was purchased by Steve Wagner, an entrepreneur with 25 years of experience in the sporting goods industry. Steve was an avid rugby player in his youth, with credits including Carleton University Varsity Team Captain, OUAA All-Star Team, Vancouver Island under 21 select team and MVP at Royal Roads Military College. With Steve's background in rugby, design and the sporting goods industry, Barbarian will continue to evolve and draw on its strong heritage.

From the initial design, to knitting, cutting and sewing the fabric, the staff at Barbarian is dedicated to producing the highest quality products that live up to the history and reputation of the Barbarian brand.
